

Hey LB Comfort!

Great Products!!!!!!!

Thought I would drop a line to tell you about your weighted wraps/blankets. I am a retired USAF Sergeant and a Disabled American Veteran who uses a few of your products on an every day basis. I use the weighted heat wraps and the weighted blanket.

After receiving severe spinal injuries while in the service many years ago, every day activities and a good night's sleep has been nearly impossible. Over the years I have had several surgeries involving the spine and rib cage. Surgery has helped a great deal but "Father Time" has not improved the situation. I have opted not to have any more surgeries and to search out ALTERNATIVE MEANS to restore the body's natural process; "The body can heal itself, just give it the right tools!" You have created one of the tools. These would be your "Therapeutic wraps and weighted blankets". I use your Neck and Shoulder wrap (dry heat and moist heat) and the weighted blanket every day.

For the Neck area I use the weighted wrap which conforms to the neck and shoulders. There are no other products which conform to the body's natural shape; Yours will do that! Sometimes I just pop it in the microwave (dry; as is) for five minutes, throw it over the shoulders and neck and I am good to go for several hours. For the back and legs, while I sleep I use the weighted blanket. I am a back sleeper but it is difficult to stay in that position. When I am restless I often wind up on my side and then the party starts; pain, numbness and just a terrible night's sleep. I then acquired you weighted blanket and started using that.

At first I used it over the legs (from the ankles to just over the hips). It was the first time in a long while I have been able to sleep on my back without awakening several times during the night. I then began playing around with the weights and now also use it on my chest and abdomen. There seems to be an almost immediate calming effect once the blanket is over you. So, here's to a good night's sleep for all of other people, a great product for myself and especially my fellow veterans.

Thanks for a great product!
